

JACQUIE WEBBY ~ NEW ZEALAND

New Zealand-born journalist, Arabian breeder and Judge Jacquie Webby has lived in many parts of the world including Australia, England and the Middle East.

A confirmed horse addict from the age of 11 when she bred her first Anglo Arabian, Jacquie initially established her Arabian stud in Australia in the early 1980s using the prefix Al Dhahab.

Relocating to the country of her birth in late 1985, she took back to New Zealand three Purebred Arabian horses and two dogs. The three horses proved to be the seed stock for the continuation of her stud and subsequently, Jacquie has imported a number of horses from Australia including Purebred, Anglo Arabian and Arabian Warmbloods and used Northern hemisphere sourced frozen semen to broaden the stud's gene pool.

Horses either bred or owned by the stud have also taken out a number of New Zealand Championships in both Purebred and Derivative rings, in both halter and performance.

In addition to Arabians, Jacquie is also accredited to judge several other horse breeds.

When asked about her “pet hates”, Jacquie responds: “A couple of my pet dislikes whilst judging is over-stretched horses at the stand-up and excessive shanking”

Jacquie says.

“Thank you for the invitation to be in Sydney in March. I am certainly looking forward to the Australian National Arabian Championships 2012”
